Welschriesling

Yields wines with generous acidity and a fruity bouquet exuding notes of green apple and lemon. While dry Welschrieslings can be very fresh culinary companions, the „Prädikat“ versions are amongst the truly great sweet wines of the world. „Beerenauslese“ and „Trockenbeerenauslese“ styles have a golden-yellow hue, the bouquet wafts with exotic fruit and the palate delivers a fine honey note along with the characteristic acidity.

Welschriesling (dry)

Winery Keringer, Mönchhof, Burgenland

Bottle 0,75 l € 25,00

Welschriesling (dry)

Winery Erwin Sabathi, Leutschach, Südsteiermark

Bottle 0,75 l € 27,00

Riesling

Young Riesling wines exude charming fruitiness and flavour, and can develop into great and complex wines through ageing. For these, notes of stone fruit are dominant and include peach, apricot and exotic fruits. Wines especially from the terroirs of the Wachau, Kremstal, Kamptal and Traisental reflect a minerality reminiscent of slate or flint. Riesling ripens slowly and reaches the highest quality as aged wines with rose-like scent. Depending on the level of ageing, they develop a pleasurable petrol tone, something that perhaps not all wine consumers like. When the late harvest grapes are infected with noble rot, then special wines are the result – Auslesen and Beerenauslesen styles with outstanding quality.

Riesling Gebling DAC Reserve (dry)

Winery Sepp Moser, Rohrendorf, Kremstal

Grüner Veltliner

Grüner Veltliner delivers all quality levels - from light, acidity-toned wines to the highly ripe Prädikat wines. The site and the yield are crucial to the quality. Spicy, peppery versions are preferred; so are versions yielding stone fruit notes.

Grüner Veltliner Federspiel Terrassen (dry)

Winery Domäne, Dürnstein - Wachau

Bottle 0,75 l € 26,00

Grüner Veltliner Galgenberg Kamptal DAC

Grüner Veltliner Wagramer Selektion (dry)

Winery Heiderer-Mayer, Baumgarten am Wagram, Niederösterreich

Bottle 0,75 l € 25,00

Pinot Blanc

Only in good vineyard sites does this variety yield the highest quality. Young wines have a blossomy expression and piquant acidity, while mature versions tend to develop bread and nut flavours. Maturation goes slowly and the highest quality is achieved after longer bottle ageing.

Pinot Blanc (dry)

Winery Skoff, Gamlitz, Steiermark

Bottle 0,75 l € 31,00

Gelber Muskateller

Can yield full yet mild wines with a delicate nutmeg flavour. Highly ripe grapes can deliver mild, very supple Prädikat wines, which partner well with sweet dishes.

Gelber Muskateller

Winery Vorspannhof Mayr, Droß - Kremstal

Chardonnay

Depending on maturity levels, wines can range from unripe, thin and grassy to fully ripe and powerful. There are two types of maturation – in “classic” steel tanks, which accentuates fruit and animated acidity; and the the most widely used method internationally – malolactic fermentation and ageing in barriques. The most important feature of a great Chardonnay is complexity, which comes through only when grapes are grown in especially good sites with calcareous soil. The best examples of these complex Chardonnays are from northern Burgenland and Steiermark, and from some sites in Niederösterreich and Wien (Vienna).

Chardonnay Darscho (dry-oak)

Winery Heinz Velich, Apetlon - Neusiedlersee

Bottle 0,75 l € 49,00

Chardonnay Heideboden

Winery Keringer, Mönchhof, Burgenland

Bottle 0,75 l € 29,00

Chardonnay Kapellenhof

Winery Kapellenhof, Walkersdorf, Niederösterreich

Sauvignon Blanc

Grown worldwide, this variety has a characteristic bouquet, which can be intrusively unripe and grassy when the grapes are not fully ripe. When the grapes have good ripeness, they develop complex aromas of black currants, gooseberries and tropical fruit. The wines develop – according to the level of maturity – from discreet to very complex. The complex versions have wonderful ageing potential especially from malolactic fermentation and barrique maturation. When the grapes are very ripe, the complex aromas retreat and a powerful, spicy wine unfolds.

Blafränkisch

The typical palate of this late ripening variety is characterized by deep wood berry or cherry tones, and reveals its characteristic acidity. Blafränkisch can yield wines with dense structure and prominent tannins. The wines are often impetuous in their youth, but develop velvety facets when sufficiently ripe. Fuller, stronger versions have good ageing potential.

Merlot

Only with high ripeness and a long maturation period do the wines present generous fruit, soft extract sweetness and round, harmonious tannins. Highly ripe wines have good ageing potential. If the grapes are not fully ripe, then there is a possibility of the wines having a grassy green character.

Merlot (dry)

Winery Horst Gager, Deutschkreutz, Mittelburgenland

Bottle 0,75 l € 57,00

Merlot Reserve

Winery Scheiblhofer, Andau, Burgenland

Winery Paul Achs, Gols, Neusiedlersee

Bottle 0,75 l € 34,00

Pinot Noir

Pinot Noir from optimal vineyard sites, with high ripeness, and through skilled vinification, can deliver high quality wines with good ageability - even despite that it is sensitive and a challenge to the winemaker in the vineyard and the cellar. Characteristically, it does not have a very dark colour. Its typical aroma is discreet with notes ranging from strawberry and raspberry to morello cherry and dried plums.

Cabernet Sauvignon

As a young wine, it is fruity and somewhat "rough-edged" with strong tannins and a powerful bouquet. A good Cabernet Sauvignon improves during ageing with delicate roasted tones and expressions of black currant, and often liquorice and green pepper. As a late-ripening variety, it must be planted in warm sites, otherwise the wines will likely show a grassy or green pepper spice character. The wines need a longer development time so that the tannins can ripen. Only when aged for a good amount of time does the wine reach its peak. Maturing in barriques is practically obligatory – it complements the variety perfectly.
